In the winter of 1846, eighty or so members of the Donner Party a group of men, women, and children became snowbound and trapped Nevada mountains. They were among the first pioneers seeking a better life in California.

Hoping to find help, on December 16th seventeen of the emigrants – 10 men (4 were fathers), 5 women (3 were mothers) and 2 children – set out on snowshoes in a desperate attempt to cross the mountains and reach a settlement near Sacramento 100 miles away. After enduring punishing physical, mental and emotional hardship, only seven survived. The rest met a horrible fate. Together, this brave group became known as the Forlorn Hope.

The Forlorn Hope Expedition began December 16th, 2020 on the 174th anniversary of the Forlorn Hope journey, culminating in 7 years of research.

Join us and hear their story.
